INTERNATIONAL AGREEMENT
signed at Brussels, 1st December, 1924

(EXTRACTS)

Article 1.—The high contracting parties undertake to establish and to maintain in each of their principal sea or river ports, services for the treatment of venereal diseases open to all merchant seamen or watermen, without distinction of nationality.

These services shall have a staff of medical specialists and a technical equipment kept constantly abreast of the progress of science. They shall be so established and worked as to be readily accessible to those desiring to make use of them. Their size shall be proportionate in each port to the volume of traffic, and they shall dispose of a sufficient number of hospital beds.

Article 2.—Medical treatment and the supply of medical necessaries shall be free of charge. The same shall apply to hospital treatment when it is considered necessary by the doctor of the service.

Patients shall receive likewise free of charge the medical supplies necessary for the treatment to be followed on the voyage till the next port of call.

Article 3.—Each patient shall receive a card, which shall be strictly personal to himself, and on which he shall be designated by a number only. On the card the doctors of the different treatment centres visited by him shall enter :—

(a) The diagnosis, with a summary of the clinical particulars noted at the time of the examination.

(b) The treatment carried out at the centre.

(c) The treatment to be followed on the voyage.

(d) The results of serological examinations undertaken in cases of syphilis (Wassermann).

Article 4.—Masters of ships and shipowners shall be required to make known to the crews the existence of the services contemplated in the present agreement.

At the time of the vessel's sanitary inspection, or of his first visit on board, the sanitary officer shall furnish the crew with notices showing the time and place for consultations.
